

Macy's supports the communities where we live and work.

Community involvement is a cornerstone of our business culture. We believe that stronger, healthier communities provide better environments for our customers and employees to live and work. Macy's is proud to be a leader in its communities through volunteerism, philanthropic grants, and fundraising initiatives. Collectively, contributions from the both Macy's and the Macy's Foundation— as well as employee contributions through workplace giving campaigns and customer contributions through our signature giving programs – totaled more than $76.6 million in 2008.

Across the country, our support helps sponsor exhibits at museums; forms partnerships with symphonies, theaters and zoos to create educational opportunities; provides scholarships and mentoring for disadvantaged youth; raises funds for the fight against breast cancer; supports women's shelters; and helps the HIV/AIDS cause with funding for testing, food banks and support services.