Central California Women's Conference to Award Valley Non-profits $100,120 in funding

The Board of Directors of the Central California Women's Conference (CCWC) is honoring 89 Valley non-profits serving women and children with grants totaling $100,120. Recipients will be recognized at CCWC's Community Celebration Reception on Tuesday, April 23.

To date, CCWC has donated more than $1,200,000 to support women and children. Grant funding has benefited recipients by providing an array of services ranging from mammograms to food, shelter, clothing, education, and more. CCWC also serves through its CCWC/Wells Fargo College Preparatory Scholarship Program. In 2018, 20 students from Fresno, Sanger, McLane and Central (east campus) high schools participated. They each received a scholarship, attended the conference, and also participated in a financial literacy workshop. In addition, CCWC partners with AT&T for its re-entry scholarship program, where five deserving women receive a scholarship, attend the conference and are hosted at a celebratory luncheon.

Now in its 32nd year, more than 94,180 women have attended the Central California Women's Conference since its inception. This year's event will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 17. Tickets go on sale in early June at ccwc-fresno.org. The 2019 CCWC presenting sponsor is Community Medical Centers.
